

Population

The population of the Lake Constance region rose up to 4.05 millions at the end of 2016. Compared to 2000 this is an increase of 14 percent .

Statistical offices in the region project further increase of the total population until 2030.

The region's average population density (2016) is around 300 persons per km² of productive area. There are, however, significant differences within the region:

- Areas close to Lake Constance or along the Rhine as well as the Zurich metropolitan area are densely populated.
- Relatively sparsely populated areas can be found in the mountainous areas of the Alps and the German district of Sigmaringen.
